A super fund cannot accept contributions from you or for you (except contributions made by your employer) if you have not given it your Tax File Number (TFN).

There are no restrictions on receipt of Government contributions (refer to the Government contributions fact sheet at www.ato.gov.au for further details).

CONCESSIONAL CONTRIBUTIONS

Concessional contributions include:

- employer contributions (including compulsory SG, voluntary employer contributions and salary sacrifice) from all employers
- personal contributions to super for which you have been able to claim a tax deduction
- certain allocations from reserves of a super plan
- certain contributions made by other people (excluding your spouse)
- some types of transfers from an overseas fund, and
- notional taxed contributions (if you are a defined benefit super fund customer).

NON-CONCESSIONAL CONTRIBUTIONS

Non-concessional contributions include:

- contributions you make from your after-tax salary (except any such contributions for which you have been able to claim a tax deduction)
- contributions your spouse makes to your super
- concessional contributions over the concessional contributions limit (unless refunded)
- certain amounts allocated by the trustee, and
- some transfers from an overseas fund.

A super fund can only accept these contributions if you have given it your TFN.

TAX ON CONTRIBUTIONS

The amount of tax payable on super contributions depends on:

- whether the contribution is concessional or non-concessional (described below)
- the amount of the contribution
- whether you have provided your super fund with a TFN
- your total superannuation balances, and
- in some cases, your income.

Concessional contributions are generally taxed at 15% when received by a super fund. The tax payable on a contribution is generally calculated after any fees and insurance premiums have been deducted from it.

Non-concessional contributions are generally tax free when received by a super fund.

Additional tax for high income earners

If your income is $300,000 or more (for the 2016/17 financial year), you will need to pay an additional tax of 15% on some or all of your concessional contributions.

If your income excluding concessional contributions is less than $300,000, the additional tax only applies to the part of your concessional contributions that take your income over the $300,000 threshold.

The $300,000 threshold will reduce to $250,000 from 1 July 2017.

You will receive an assessment notice from the Australian Taxation Office (ATO) if you need to pay this tax. You can generally pay it from your super account.

If you have defined benefits, it will generally be possible to defer tax which relates to your defined benefits. You will generally have to pay this tax (plus interest) when you receive your benefits.

Your income for contributions tax purposes includes:

- your taxable income (including the taxable component of any super benefit you receive*)
- your reportable fringe benefits
- your total net investment loss, and
- any concessional contributions.

* If you are between preservation age and age 60 and receive a super benefit where a tax offset reduces tax on part or all of the taxable component to zero, this part of the benefit is not counted as income. This applies to amounts up to $195,000 for the 2016/2017 financial year ($200,000 for the 2017/18 financial year).

No TFN tax

A super fund can't accept contributions from you, or for you (except contributions made by your employer), if you do not give it your TFN.

If you don't give your TFN to your super fund, your fund will have to pay extra tax of 34% (for the 2016/17 financial year) or 32% (from 1 July 2017) of all your concessional contributions and will deduct this from your account. If your fund has already paid this extra tax, you can still give your super fund your TFN. Your super fund may be able to claim the extra tax back from the ATO and put it in your super account, however there are timeframes and limitations on reclaiming backdated contributions.

If you leave your fund before submitting your TFN and your fund has paid extra tax to the ATO for you, you may be able to request a refund of this extra tax. Call the Customer Care Team on 1300 652 770 for information about this process.

Claiming a tax deduction for your super contributions

You may be eligible to claim a tax deduction for your super contributions, if:

- less than 10% of your income comes from employment as an employee (this condition applies to the 2016/2017 financial year but not for later financial years)
- the contributions were received by the fund no later than 28 days after the end of the month in which you turned 75
- you give a valid notice to the super fund of your intention to claim a deduction and the super fund acknowledges your notice, and
- the notice is given to the super fund by the earlier of:
  - the time you lodge your income tax return for the year, or
  - the end of the financial year following the year the contribution was made.

A notice will not be valid and you won't be able to claim if:

- the notice does not meet ATO requirements
- you have left the super fund you are issuing the notice to
- the trustee no longer holds that contribution for you (i.e. if you have made a partial withdrawal from your super fund, you may only be able to claim a deduction on part of your contribution), or
- the trustee has started to pay an income stream or pension to you.

Your deductible superannuation contributions plus your other concessional contributions are limited to your concessional contributions cap.

Call the Customer Care Team on 1300 652 770 for more information about claiming a deduction.

Spouse contributions tax offset

If your income (assessable income, reportable fringe benefits and reportable employer superannuation contributions) is below $10,800 in the 2016/17 financial year, your spouse may be entitled to a tax offset of 18% for contributions (up to $3,000) they make for you. If your income is between $10,800 and $13,800, they may be entitled to a reduced tax offset.

From 1 July 2017, the $10,800 threshold will increase to $37,000 and the $13,800 cut-off point will increase to $40,000.

You need to meet certain conditions to be eligible for a tax offset. These include that:

- you must be living with your spouse and you must both be Australian Residents, and
- from 1 July 2017, your total superannuation balance (including any pension balances but excluding any structured settlement amounts) at the prior 30 June was less than $1.6 million, and
- from 1 July 2017, you did not exceed your non-concessional contributions cap for the year.

CONTRIBUTION CAPS

Contribution caps apply to all contributions made to your super within a financial year. You may need to pay extra tax on amounts in excess of these caps. If you want to avoid excess contributions, it is your responsibility to make sure that the total amount of each type of contribution to your super does not exceed the limit (note that avoiding excess contributions may not be possible in some circumstances e.g. if you are a high income earner and have contributions from multiple employers).

Concessional contributions cap

The concessional contributions cap for the 2016/2017 financial year depends on your age at the end of the previous financial year. The caps are:

Age at 30 June 2016	Concessional contributions cap for 2016/17
Under 49	$30,000
49 and above	$35,000

The ATO will work out whether you have exceeded your cap and will notify you if you need to pay additional tax.

The concessional contributions cap for the 2017/18 financial year will be $25,000 (for all ages).

Non-concessional contributions cap

The non-concessional contributions cap is $180,000 for the 2016/17 financial year and applies to all ages.

If you are under age 65 at any time during a financial year, you can generally bring forward two financial years of non-concessional contributions and make total non-concessional contributions of up to three times the non-concessional contributions cap over a three year period.

The bring forward provision is automatically triggered if you contribute more than the non-concessional contributions cap in a financial year e.g. more than $180,000 in the 2016/17 financial year.

Normally, if that contribution, plus the next two financial years' of contributions, exceeds three times the non-concessional contributions cap applicable in the year you triggered the bring forward provision, the amount over this cap will be considered an excess non-concessional contribution.

However, special rules apply from 1 July 2017 if you triggered the bring-forward provisions in the 2015/16 or 2016/17 financial year and have not fully utilised your bring forward limit by 30 June 2017. This is because from 1 July 2017:

- the standard non-concessional contributions cap is reducing to $100.000; and
- a special non-concessional contributions cap of zero will apply if your total superannuation balance (including any pension balances but excluding any structured settlement amounts) was $1.6 million or more at the prior 30 June, along with modified bring-forward provisions if your total super balance was $1.4 million or more at the prior 30 June.

Refer to the Australian Taxation Office website ato.gov.au for more information about these rules.

If you exceed the caps

The ATO will send you an excess contributions assessment if you exceed a cap. You can then elect to get a refund of the excess contributions (less the 15% contributions tax for excess concessional contributions).

Excess concessional contributions

- Your excess concessional contributions will be treated as assessable income and taxed at your marginal income tax rate;
- The ATO will apply a tax offset of 15% (reflecting the contributions tax paid by the super fund) that will result in you having to pay the same amount of tax overall as if you had received the excess contributions as salary;
- You will need to pay interest on the tax, as it will be collected later than income tax on your salary. The interest will be calculated from the beginning of the financial year in which the excess occurred (even if this is before the contributions were made); and
- If not refunded, the excess amount will be counted towards your non-concessional contributions.

Excess non-concessional contributions

After receiving your assessment, you can choose for your super fund to refund your excess non-concessional contributions, including 85% of notional investment earnings on those contributions. If you do not obtain a refund of your excess contributions, they will be taxed at 49% (2016/17) or 47% (excess contributions made from 1 July 2017).

The ATO will count the full amount of refunded notional investment earnings as assessable income and will tax you at your marginal rate. They will, however, apply a 15% tax offset to recognise these earnings have already been taxed in the fund.

What you need to do

The ATO will tell you how to get your excess contributions refunded or pay the extra tax when they send you an excess contributions assessment. Different rules apply, depending on when the excess contributions were made and whether the assessment relates to concessional or non-concessional contributions.

If you have enough money, you can generally ask your super fund to pay the tax from your super account. If we pay your tax from your super, or refund any excess contributions, we will charge you a withdrawal fee.

We may not be able to pay or refund tax from any defined benefit you might have in your plan.

Call the Customer Care Team on 1300 652 770 for more information about this process.
